As a single middle-income taxpayer, I would like to voice my opinion on the issue of the suggested tax reform. I absolutely disagree with such a plan, and I think most people at or below my income level would certainly not support it as well. It is frankly an absurd idea from the government. Everyone knows that the main part of Hong Kong's competitiveness in its economy, is the fact that it is a low tax heaven for business and tourists alike. Hong Kong is a relatively liberal society, and should not turn to the socialist model. People in Hong Kong have always been used to the life of "self-reliance", not relying on government for most things. Such a plan would surely destroy the Hong Kong economy, and also create many other related social problems as a result.
