i born in hong kong and now live in hong kong. i immigrate to vancouver with my family in 1992. already used to pay 14% tax when buying goods there, which are 7 pst and 7 gst respectively. I think 5% in hong kong now is resonably. people oppose because they are not used for it, if they used for it, they will not oppose this so much. we live in hong kong, and can have a stable and safe community, we should bear the tax too. i agree we should share some parts too. i live in a class of hong kong family, which we belong to the toppest tax payer group. So personally speaking, 5% is nothing so important for me. however i do concern about those elderly, those poor and those in needed. if they need to count a 5 dollars fish or a 5 dollars vegetable for dinner, they will think 5% is a lot for them. I hope that this 300 billion gst taxes can go to those who in needed. i specially concern those who is sick, those visited public hopsital, those line up to have operation in public hospital for so long time, those need to pay $ for expensive medicine but they are poor themselves. Personally, i very much willing to save a clothing, a bag, and being a part to share the tax in hong kong. But I do hope that hong kong can become a good place to live like the place vancouver (recently rank #1 best living in the world) where people dont need to scare no $ when they r sick, no much begger on the street, elderly dont need to line up under sunshine to get a bag of rice.
