I am a HK citizen for 35 years and I am totally supportive of the introduction of sales tax. HK needs to find a way to secure the flow of income in order to meet future unexpected economic down turns. 5% tax rate is nothing. I strongly believe that this could not cause inflation and hardship for the public. Those poor and less fortunate people can benefit from this policy in the long term as the gov is more enabled to help them with more tax income. In 10 years time, HK people are getting older and older, and less people are paying income tax. How can we answer this question? Are we asking our son / grandson to bear the huge burden of tax in the future ?
