Prosponing the GST is one of the most irresponsible act that I have witnessed in my entire life. Obviously, bordening of the tax base is inevitable for HK now and GST can be one of the fairest option on the table, but now you are suspending it without any viable solution, how can a government do this to its taxpayers !!!

I don't know what is your next step. Since you have decided to abandon the new income source to the government, I suppose you have a detail plan on how to cut your budget accordingly. Or are you simply thinking that you can increase the income tax or property tax again and again, and just put the burden on the 5/10% so-called "middle class" people, AGAIN ???

GST is a very successful system that have been implemented in most of the developed countries all over the world. And it has proven itself to be the fairest tax system which every single individual is contributing to the society. It doesn't help at all to just lower or even cancel the existing personal allowance on income tax. The burden is coming back to the "middle class". People on the lower end of the income range may have to pay a few hundreds/thousands more on income tax every year, but based on the current system, the middle class people have to pay an extra 20K, and this is simply not fair !!

I know all you are concerning now is the next term, too bad we middle class are the minoity and we don't have a logical voting system here in HK.

Totally disappointed in HK, and the government !! Shame on you all !!
